Hunger in the Inland Empire

Over 800,000 people in the I.E.'s community live below the poverty level. Hunger in the I.E. often targets our seniors, veterans, college students, and children. In fact, it is estimated that 1 in 4 children throughout the I.E. suffer from food insecurity. FARSB's mission is to end hunger in the Inland Empire. This mission entails that FARSB examine and develop programs that address the underlying causes of hunger, such as, poverty, unemployment, education, and even demographics.

Support in the Inland Empire

The Inland Empire is a region with great needs, yet limited resources. The region has significantly low rates of philanthropic interest and investment, especially in comparison with nearby neighbors, such as Los Angeles and Orange County. The average per capita giving in the I.E. is $8.81 compared to that of LA which has an average of $159.35 and Orange County at $80.05. FARSB has been faced with inadequate resources since inception and has relied upon shared maintenance from partner agencies and the generosity of large donors and corporations to continue its mission of ending hunger in the Inland Empire.
